China in the Global Energy Transition

China is the world's largest producer and consumer of energy, so its choices will be crucial both for meeting global energy demand and for delivering on global climate targets. In light of China's leadership in clean energy, its 2060 carbon-neutrality target and its energy-security needs, how can Chinese and other global stakeholders work together to drive the energy transition? *This is a livestreamed session. Building Resilience: Financing Local Economies

Small and medium enterprises (SMEs) are a vital engine of growth, employment and resilience but are systematically constrained by a lack of access to sufficient financing. In Africa alone they make up more than 90% of businesses, 80% of the workforce and up to 70% of GDP, yet in some countries they receive only 10% of commercial financing. Social enterprises, while being a relatively small subset of such SMEs, are a segment of increasing importance due to their role in actively developing solutions for the most pressing social challenges. This session will explore potential pathways and collaborative financing opportunities to catalyse local and global capital for SMEs and social enterprises. It will explore the complimentary roles that global capital players and local intermediaries can play in driving systematic changes to address existing barriers. On the agenda: · Exploring actionable financial pathways for SME and social enterprise finance in the Global South. · Call for action for engagement of established and new actors in SME and social enterprise finance. · Invitation to form multistakeholder partnerships to collaborate in identifying and implementing new pathways to catalyse global and local capital for SMEs and social enterprises.

Innovation for SDGs – Restoring Marine Ecosystems

Overfishing, pollution and climate change have led to an explosion of sea urchins that are destroying whole kelp ecosystems, a critical carbon sink and a vital part of the marine ecosystem. In line with SDG14, UpLink innovator Urchinomics restores kelp forests and creates rural job opportunities through the removal of urchins to land-based aquaculture systems where they are converted for sale to restaurants.
